Forecast for Tuesday 24 Nov 2020

Weather: Rain and drizzle will continue during the morning becoming heavier at times. There will be some drier interludes from late morning and during the afternoon but remaining cloudy with drizzly outbreaks especially around Snowdon. Gale force southwesterly winds, severe gales higher up on the mountains making for quite unpleasant conditions when walking.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 20% chance, for most of the day cloud will be extensive from 400m with very few breaks in the north, perhaps some clearance for the peaks around Bala.

Visibility: Mostly moderate and becoming poor in rainfall. In the south visibility may become good for a time in between rainfall.
